

Character Sheet

The background of the page features a faint, artistic illustration of two samurai in a forest. One samurai is in the foreground, wearing a dark kimono and a wide-brimmed hat, holding a sword. The other samurai is in the background, also in traditional attire, holding a bow. The scene is set in a misty, wooded area with tall trees and a small stream.

Backstory: A character's backstory should be grounded in reality, but also unique and compelling enough to capture the reader's interest.

Motivation: A character needs a clear reason for why they are taking the actions they do. Their motivation should be consistent throughout the story.

Flaws: No one is perfect, and your character shouldn't be either. Give your character realistic flaws that will make them relatable to readers.

Personality: A character's personality should be distinct and well-defined. This will make them feel like a real person, rather than just a collection of traits.

Goals: A character should have clear goals that drive their actions throughout the story. These goals should be challenging but achievable.

Relationships: A character's relationships with other characters in the story should be well developed and meaningful. They should affect the character's actions and decisions.

Growth: A good character should change and grow over the course of the story. They should learn from their mistakes and become a better person by the end.

Inner conflict: A character's inner conflict should be clear and compelling. This will create tension and keep readers engaged.

Dialogue: A character's dialogue should be distinct and reflect their personality. It should also serve to move the story forward.

Physical description: A character's physical description should be memorable and unique. It should also be consistent throughout the story.